In a volatile market, due diligence can be the difference between confidence and uncertainty

Our Responsibility

Life insurance provides the liquidity to execute a specific planning objective. As a result, confidence in the insurance company's financial integrity is vital. To more carefully monitor the financial ratings of insurance companies, our website has been significantly upgraded to provide accurate and current due diligence information. Our commitment is to continually research the marketplace and expand our website with information that is useful to you and your clients.

Financial Marketplace

Currently, life insurance companies are weathering market turmoil with modest impact. State regulatory oversight has been more effective than federal oversight of other segments of the financial services industry. However, many economic experts predict this market condition will extend for 2-3 years. It will be important to monitor changes in the market and determine the impact on companies' portfolios and their ability to access capital.

Our Resources:

Size matters ... we only work with the largest and most financially secure companies. Collectively, our organization and our strategic partners did in excess of $309 million of premium. Through our influential relationships with more than 80 insurance companies, we have access to information concerning changes in their management teams, market focus, product pricing, asset quality, etc. that may impact their ratings.
